FRED WATSON FINANCIER

BY DONALD ALLEN

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

The trouble with Mr. Fred Watson, bachelor and thirty years old, was that no one took him seriously. He had a fair income, and he was indolent. For years and years he had been going to do this or that—something to make the world sit up and think—but he had gone on doing nothing. It had come about that he had many friends and few believers.

Mr. Watson had decided that he was in love with a certain young lady. She could not believe that he was sincere, and married another. Three months later he was just as much in love with another, and received no more credit.

Mrs. James Renfew, a young widow, was Mr. Watson's second cousin. He had fallen in love and proposed matrimony three different times before her marriage to Mr. Renfew. A year after the cousin had been left a widow he proposed again. He was just as serious as he had been on the other occasions. He was just as certain in his own mind that marriage was the thing for him.

It was well for the bachelor that he had a fixed income, and that he could anticipate none of it in advance. He was known as an "easy mark." In fact, he was so easy that on one occasion a get-rich-quick man had returned his money with a note saying that he did not take the money from children.

The cousin had expected the fourth proposal, and when it came she answered:

"Fred, it is not probable I shall ever marry again, but if I do it will be to a financier. I have always had an admiration for that class of men. The newspapers call them wolves and all that, but a man who can beat Wall street has brains. Think of a man acquiring an old railroad fifty miles long and turning it into a trunk line reaching from ocean to ocean! Think of a man consolidating half a dozen starving corporations into one that pays thirty per cent dividends! Think—"

"I shall do the same or better!" calmly announced Mr. Watson.

"You poor child!" exclaimed the cousin as she laughed in his face. "Why, Fred, if you were financier enough to buy forty bushels of potatoes at forty cents a bushel could sell them at the first offer at thirty-five?"

"Cousin, I shall become a great financier."

"When?"

"Right away. You admire financiers, and therefore I shall take up that line. When I have shown you that I am a success at it I shall hope for your hand. What do you say?"

"I don't forbid you to hope, but now don't go off and lose all you have. Your love is hereby rejected and good natured. Don't clatter it."

"But I am no longer indolent."

"Since when?"

"Half an hour ago. Now that I have hope to sustain me I am going to hustle. Monday I start for the west to begin my financiering. I shall take up mines. You have made money in them, why should not I?"

"Fred Watson, don't be an idiot!" was the exclamation. "Why, they'll skin you out of your patrimony in a week! My investments were made by a sharp lawyer, and though I have had some big dividends I don't feel safe. Gracious, but you are the last man who should think of going there!"

"If they can beat the financier they are welcome to. The financier will be working for the heart and hand of his dear cousin. He now has something to strive for. For the first time in his life he feels that he has struck his gait. Mr. Easy Mark sheds his name."

Mrs. Renfew advanced other arguments and besought the interference of mutual friends, but Mr. Watson was obdurate. No one had ever found him so determined. He departed on the day set, and in due time another tenderfoot arrived in Nevada. He arrived there because the train did, and because Providence guided him.

When he reached his objective point, the Emma mine, from which the widow was drawing dividends, was only two miles away. The name of the mine was to be buzzed about, and within an hour he learned that the same old game had been worked again. The Emma was a hole in the ground, but scarcely more. Its glowing examples were frauds. Its dividends had been paid from the money sent in. The time had come for the swindlers to skip, and they had that very morning taken their boodle and departed.

There were winks and grins and talk, but no one called them villains. The same game had been played scores of times. If suckers had bitten at hook exposed time after time, who should feel any sympathy for them? In this case, as the financier ascertained, the swindlers had not departed east or west by railroad. For some unknown reason they had just conscience enough left to feel that a few days' retirement into the hills was due the public. That would give the duped ones time to boil their tears and invest elsewhere.

Until Mr. Fred Watson had heard all about the "Emma" he had not decided just how to begin his financiering. That gave him his cue. He surprised the natives some next morning by riding away all alone. He had bought a horse, and he had bought guns and provisions. He didn't look as if he wanted to be eaten by a grizzly bear, and he certainly was too green to be taken for a prospector, and the oldtimers finally decided that he must be an artist in search of scenery. Not a person would give him credit for being a financier, and yet that was what he was. He had set out to track down the swindlers and their boodle. It was a job for the sheriff and his posse, but had not the Widow Renfew said she would not marry anybody but a financier? It was a plain case of a fool rushing in.

There were three partners in the swindle. They had retired to a hunter's cabin fifty miles away. It was four days before the tenderfoot overhauled them. They had known where they were going, he had had to go slow and pick up the trail. His friends had said that he had no stamina—no persistency—no stick-to-it, but he followed on like a bloodhound. To do what? They would be three to one and armed. A few times in his indolent life Mr. Watson had fired a pistol at a shooting gallery and had hit—nothing. A few times only he had ridden a horse in the park, but now as regularly as his watch he bucked him off he climbed into the saddle again.

The arrival at the hunter's cabin was made at mid afternoon. It was a warm, lazy day, and the three men slept beneath a tree. Mr. Watson had never even read a pirate story, but a natural instinct told him how pirates ought to work.

There were arms in plenty in the cabin. On four and stepping softly, he deposited them at the bottom of a handy ravine. When the sleepers awoke at his call it was to behold two guns pointed at them. They were permitted to sit up and gaze at the disorder of their slumbers. They were asked to unbuckle their money belts and toss them to him. If only the fellows at the club could have seen Student Fred then! Not one of the true made that charge against him. The election raged but he parted with his cash at the same time.

Ten days later the financier was ushered into the presence of the widow who admired cash that sort. He laid a package on a stand and said:

"Cousin Jennie, you had fifteen thousand dollars invested in the Emma mine. In two weeks I have made it sixty-five thousand, and here it is. I put nothing whatever invested, but in two weeks I have made three times as much. Do you know of any financier who can beat that? If you do I'll go back and try once more."

The widow had wed a financier, and here was a second one. She placed her hand in his.

He Had to Go Slow and Pick Up the Trail.

His Work Wasted.

At a reception at the Tuileries the Emperor Napoleon Third asked Edmund About if he knew Spanish. About, who had been long angling for an important diplomatic post, answered prudently: "Not yet, sire." But the very next day he went hard to work to learn it and a few months later he said to the emperor: "Sire, I can speak Spanish now." Though the sovereign seemed rather surprised About continued, nothing daunted: "I have learned Spanish because your majesty asked me if I could speak that language." "Ah, yes!" answered Napoleon. "I remember now. I had just been reading Don Quixote in the original, and had taken great pleasure in it."

Groom Flees Near Church.

Deserted by her sweetheart when 100 yards from the church on their way to be married at Wyoming, Pa., Miss Johanna Capdinski had a warrant issued for the backward groom. He is R. M. Galen and he was captured by a constable. He is charged with breach of promise, and has been held for a hearing later. The minister and the guests were waiting when Galen departed. The greatly perturbed girl waited a couple of hours and then the wedding was called off. Later, as he did not appear with any explanation, the girl decided to have him arrested.

Fruitless Struggling.

"I understand that after waiting 20 years she married a struggling young man?"

"Yes, poor chap. He struggled the best he knew how, but she landed him."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

NOTHING DOING, IMA HOGG, LEMON PEEL ARE EXAMPLES.

Appeals for Legal Change of Name Show That Much Practical Joking Is Practiced on Helpless Infants.

Chicago—Naming the baby is in most families, quite properly, a serious affair, in which every member is interested. No name can be too beautiful, too poetic, too ineffable, for that small, pink-faced person to bear through life; no name can be associated with too illustrious a personage of history, too fascinating a character in romance. From the great G. W. and King Arthur downward, baby is good enough to be anybody's namesake. Such is the usual attitude of parents, with which the world sympathizes while it smiles. Nevertheless, it is surprising to what names, and conjunctions of names, reckless or cruelly jocular parents will condemn their children. English records of recent years reveal that Robert New named his two sons Nothing and Something. Mr. Mixer, Mr. Peel and Mr. Codd named their respective babies Pepper, Lemon and Salt, while Mr. Ware's little girl became China and Mr. Gentle's Always.

An appeal for legal change of name allowed the general public to learn that the brothers Pigg bore the Christian names of Black, Brown, Gay and Guinney. Their request, it is needless to say, was promptly granted. The unfortunate twins Sudden Death and Jolly Death showed a yet further abuse of parental privilege in their cognomens; but they did not change them. Practical joking at the expense of helpless infants is certainly unpardonable. It is said to be less rare in this country than across the water, although James S. Hogg, governor of Texas, named his daughter Ima. Every one in society in Texas knows Ima Hogg. An extraordinary instance of the bestowal of striking names upon a whole family of ten children was reported recently. Mr. and Mrs. Million of Oregon could never, it seems, quite agree upon names entirely satisfactory to both, so as a matter of convenience they had resorted to numbers. The official of a financial concern says that when the names of subscribers to the bond issue proposed by that concern were sent in one was that of Ten Million. It was naturally supposed to be an assumed name, and a letter was sent to the address given, rather sharply stating that bonds could be registered in real names only, and that no further attention would be paid to his subscription unless he gave his real name.

An explanatory note was soon received from Mr. Million, written upon paper bearing the printed letterhead of a firm of Million & Million, reiterating his own name, and adding those of his brother and sisters. One, Two, Three, Four, Five, Six, Seven (his partners), and the rest. As the Million children, that is, as the Ten Million—at least, as the ten children by the name of Million grew up—most of them, he admitted, had modified their numeral prefixes; the Misses One and Three Million, for example, becoming Nine and Trio, while Ten himself was commonly known as Tents. Legally, however, his name still remained unchanged, and in the eyes of the law he was Ten Million.

HER TEETH WENT ASTRAY

New Jersey Spinster Writes Postmaster General Hitchcock for Her Lost Upper Plates.

Washington.—A New Jersey spinster entrusted her false teeth to the mails and they went astray. Recently Postmaster General Hitchcock received the following appeal from her:

"Dear Sir: I suppose you have received a note from the Camden postmaster that the upper plates of my teeth have been lost in the mails. They were mailed at Camden. I should like very much to hear from you. If you are unfortunate enough to have store teeth you know how inconvenient it is to have to do without them, and I have not had them even a year. I paid $55 for them and I cannot afford to get any more just now. So will you kindly do what you can for me and as quickly as possible."

"P. S.—They were very good teeth."

The postmaster general put one of the best inspectors in the service on the job to find the missing ivories.

Woman Breaks Wildcat's Back.

Mountainair, N. M.—The man who fights wildcats with his hands must now take a back seat to Mrs. Samuel Edwards, of this place, who killed a big bobcat with her two feet. She discovered the animal in her farmyard where her little baby was at play. Unarmed, she took a running jump at the beast, landing squarely on its back, breaking its spine.

Convict Gets Saws in Food.

Sioux City, Ia.—Harry Clark, a prisoner in the county jail, sentenced to five years for shooting his mother-in-law, received a basket of toothsome sandwiches from his wife. Jailer Mac Dougall, suspicious of the shape of some of the sandwiches, opened them and discovered they contained a stick of carbon, a bunch of insulated wire and two fine steel saws.

REAL BOON TO ALL HUMANITY

Mrs. Hawgood Cannot Understand Why One Should Not Listen to Talk of Other People.

"I met a man today," said Harrison Hawgood, "who is working on a great invention—an invention that will be a real boon to humanity if he succeeds in perfecting it."

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Hawgood.

"A contrivance to put in one's ear so that one may ride in an elevated, trolley car or in any other kind of a public conveyance and not have to listen to the conversation of people who sit next to one. It is so constructed that when he gets it perfected that I cannot possibly be seen, yet it will make it possible for the wearer to get along without hearing a word that is spoken even by people who sit beside him or in seats directly back of or in front of him."

"Well, but why shouldn't one wish to hear the conversation of other people?"

One for the Clergy.

Somewhat Superior Young Minister of the Episcopal Church No, dear lady, frankly I cannot persuade myself that it would be safe to let women vote.

And what, may I ask, is your reason for opposing it?"

Well, dear lady, I cannot but think that if women were to vote it would make them, let us say, a little er—er masculine."

"Oh, I don't know. It has never had that effect upon the clergy."—Life.

A CHOICE OF TERMS.

Miss Rather—Have you congratulated our hostess on her birthday?

Miss Clever—No, I have condoled with her.

S. Holmes Jr.

"Hah!" exclaimed Sherlock Holmes Jr.

"What is the skoil?" asked Dr. Watson.

The great amateur detective and his friend were sitting in the private office of Inspector T. Bullman, the inspector waiting for him to return from lunch.

"Like man has a homely strong rapier, for which he has no affection," said Holmes.

"But I thought you told me you didn't know him."

"I don't. Haven't you noticed that he keeps a picture of his middle-aged wife on his desk?"

No Place for Him.

"Star in our bright?" said the president of the corporation.

"Yes, sir," replied the vice-president. "Has anything of importance happened?"

"No, I merely want to find out just how far we can go without being in danger of becoming liable to arrest."

"Far it seems to me, if I may say so, we are going about as far as our conscience should of us."

"Conscience? Oh." Say, you'd bet ter quit big business and go run a Sunday school somewhere."

On Ice.

"Yes," said Alkali Ike, "a couple o' cow punchers indulged in a very pretty scientific scrap down at Bad Hacker's yesterday."

"It's wonderful how cool those fellows work under the circumstances," remarked the eastern tourist.

"Yes, they certainly have to be kept cool, stranger. I believe, for some reason or other, their funerals ain't to be for a couple o' days yet."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Pointer for Housewives.

Subbubs—Well, I've just engaged two girls at the intelligence office.

Urbane—Going to keep two maids now?

Subbubs—Mercy, no! I engaged one to come Monday and the other a week from Monday, when No. 1 will no doubt be leaving. I can't spend all my time hunting intelligence offices.—Judge.

A Hair-Raising Accident.

"What was the commotion at the theater the other night when the crowd gathered in the lobby?"

"A lady coming out had a head-on collision with an obtruding gas jet, and her elaborate coiffure was a perfect wreck."

"What was the cause of it?"

"I think a misplaced switch."

The Straight of It.

"Is my hat on straight?"

"I can't tell."

"Can't tell when a woman's hat is on straight?"

"Well, it is hanging just above your left ear."

"Then it's on straight. Good-by."

Entered as SECOND CLASS MATTER [illegible] at RICHMOND, CAL., under the ACT OF CONGRESS, [illegible]

SATURDAY, July 15, 1911

There is [illegible] moment in the City of Richmond.

PROF. HENRY HALL WINS.

The National Educational Association, at this convention [illegible] body and tail, which convened in San Francisco this week, was captured by the insurgents of "N. E. A. rebels," and Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, of Chicago, the president, proved an unexcelled parliamentarian and wire puller when the "old guard" was put to rout by her maneuvers which succeeded in the naming and election of her choice, Prof. Carroll G. Pearse, of Milwaukee as President of the National Educational Association and Mrs. Young was elected First Vice President from Illinois and Hon. Edw. Hyatt, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, is Vice President from California and a better selection could be made.

Our friend, Prof. Henry C. Hall, created a commotion and panic [illegible] S. Keyes, the New York educator, to rout which he worked a stampede to Miss Katherine Loveland Blake of New York for President of the National Educational Association in place of the incumbent. Treasurer Durand W. Springer of Michigan, Keyes' friend, and Miss Blake was elected in a parliamentarium by the insurgent overwhelming forces. The sessions were very instructive.

RICHMOND POST AFFAIRS.

When Uncle Sam gives us free city postal delivery, the names of all suburban post offices within city limits will pass away and the name Richmond will be preserved as the general post office name, a case along the line of the Darwinian theory, "the survival of the fittest." It means that Richmond is well and truly one great big city, and nothing has done it so to destroy the line of demarkation of the "principalities." The west side having lost the [illegible] not improbable that the postmaster will be selected so as to [illegible] defeat.

Only where sidewalks are laid is mail delivered free in Contra Costa. There will be an incentive for sidewalks, also for annexation of territory outside the city limits, toward San Pablo, Stege and Pullman, where there are sidewalks and where free postal delivery direct to the door of the residence or business, and this is what annexation means—a direct connection with the world as often as the mail arrives.

In Contra Costa County the rural delivery post may be served from the Richmond delivery center instead of from Berkeley, until the sidewalks are laid. Uncle Sam gives good service.

The carriers are under the civil service, notice of examination of carriers are posted about thirty days before examination, unless the postal department waives this rule; experience counts and applicants must be sober; instruction blanks can be secured from the U. S. Post Offices Building, on Seventh near Mission in San Francisco.

The fight for postmaster for this city is waxing warm, and it may that the toga may fall upon some dark horse, or it may be decided to make no change for the present.

BELT LINE PAYS.

Although employes living in the city of Richmond, and working in the industries, besides paying ten cents daily on the local electric cars, also pay 25 cents daily on the Belt Line cars for a ride to their labors to the deep water front and give up 35 cents a day out of their wages to go to their work, every one is happy at the long jolly ride, and the Belt Railway stockholders are happy for the revenue from the fares of employes, amounts to [illegible] a month or $3,000 a year. The savings of the Belt Railway [illegible] cents of the are [illegible] annually.

INNER HARBOR SURE.

Richmond's Inner Harbor [illegible] says "Let's keep local shipping as near the center as possible, so that fresh vegetables, eggs and poultry may come direct to [illegible] our merchants get fixed [illegible] and public [illegible] [illegible] Inner Harbor will [illegible] steam shovel up to [illegible] Cutting Bonita [illegible] Inner Harbor will [illegible] Richmond Channel [illegible] San Pablo Bay, but [illegible] first."

JAMES OWENS IS MAYOR

Last Monday night Councilman James Owens was elected to the office of mayor by a vote of 5 to 3, vice Joseph B. Willis, who resigned, Councilman Garrard being absent. Mayor-elect Owens accepted the honor in a brief speech and, after qualifying took the chair and as soon as the seat was warmed named the following committees:

FINANCE: J. B. Willis, John Hartnett and E. J. Garrard.

ORDINANCE: G. A. Follett, Otto Ludewig and H. L. Perry.

PUBLIC BUILDING: E. J. Garrard, H. L. Perry and G. A. Follett.

LICENSE: John Hartnett, J. B. Willis and H. L. Perry.

SCHOOLS—

STREET: John J. Dooling, Edw. McDuff and G. A. Follett.

SEWER: H. L. Perry, Edw. McDuff and John J. Dooling.

WATER: E. J. Garrard, G. A. Follett and Otto Ludewig.

LIGHT AND FIRE: Otto Ludewig, John J. Dooling and Edw. McDuff.

POLICE: J. B. Willis, Edw. McDuff and E. J. Garrard.

HEALTH: Edw. McDuff, Otto Ludewig and John J. Dooling.

Councilman Garrard was placed in nomination and received only three votes, Follett, Perry and Ludewig. Neither Garrard nor Owens sought the honor. Councilman Owens was in line and was in a position to attend to the responsibilities of the office of mayor.

James Owens was born in Kentucky, enlisted in the Spanish American war, and held the position of Secretary in the Philippines under President Taft, and was honorably discharged, coming to Richmond he engaged in the hotel business and was elected one of nine chattel councilmen, receiving the highest vote; he was elected a member of Richmond Industrial Commission in which position he worked strong influence to secure factories and is a booster in every department of the city government. Mayor Owens resides at the Alta Apartments and his real estate office is in the Berry Building, both on Macdonald Ave.

The city attorney, city tax collector, city treasurer, city assessor, city clerk, police judge, all have to have offices or residence near Mayor Owens where they can readily advise.

Clinton Brown, a student of Cornell University, New York, a relative of the Tennant estate whose home was at Cleveland, Ohio, there enlisted in the Spanish American war and was killed in the engagement at San Juan Hill. The two Saints bring Mayor Owens and the Browns nearer together.

H. M. Brown, father of the late Clinton Brown, was for many years a director of Euclid Avenue National Bank of Cleveland, and is a cousin of Ossawatomie Brown.

W. E. Luce has been appointed manager of the Pacific Gas & Electric agency for Richmond and has opened offices in the Busy corner near Macdonald Ave. and Seventh St. Mr. Luce was until lately engaged with the Western States Gas & Electric Co. which also has its office on Macdonald.

Mr. Luce is a live wire.

East Shore & Suburban Ry
—Electric cars. Local service.

The electric cars give service equipped by any modern American city. Cars from all parts of the city transfer at the main junction at Macdonald Avenue and Sixth St., also at Macdonald Ave. and Twenty-Third. Fare 5 cents. Broadway and Seventh, Oakland to Richmond, 10c. Fare to Richmond, 10c.

Richmond Belt Railway

The Belt Line connects Richmond with the commerce of the world through the oceanic and inland shipping with Richmond as a distributing center. The great overland railroads, the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe, which by trade agreements, control the Belt and its wharves, each assuming separate responsibility every alternate year. The largest vessels afloat discharge and take on cargo and meet the Terminal overland railroads here at deeper water than at San Francisco. The Belt Line also carries factory, warehouse, wharf and other employes, twice daily, via East Shore & Suburban electric cars to and from their homes in Richmond.

OWES HER HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am fifty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up and make them strong and well. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has always helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicines. I feel I never can thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me."—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, contains no harmful drugs, and is prepared for the largest and most successful cure of female diseases.

NURSE PLAYS A MEAN JOKE

Change of Babies Causes Proud Father to Lose All His Faith in Humanity.

A bunch of the nurses out at St. Luke's hospital are still laughing over the case of a youngish man who several weeks ago became the proud father of a brand new baby.

It was only a girl baby, but he liked it just as well as if it had been a boy. Moreover, as it was the first time he had ever been a parent he had a realization of the great similarity in the general run of babies, so on the morning that the young man was the proudest he had ever been in his life he was taken to the nursery to look at his offspring.
